The chain of buoys are floating along the breakwater by the penguin colony. The buoys are preventing access for the penguins to the burrows, and are right in front of the rocks. She is claiming that the buoys are preventing access to the penguin colony and is also claiming that the ecologist they have hired cannot know about the buoys because she is not always on site. I have tried explaining that the ecologist cannot always be on site and may already know about the colony and the buoys, but she will not have any of this. She would like DOC to intervene even though it sounds like approval has already been sought and resource consent gained.
