Executive summary – Whakarāpopoto ā kaiwhakahaere

1. This briefing discusses high level approaches to upholding Treaty settlement commitments in the Conservation Amendment Bill, in light of further analysis of the complexity and expectations involved.

Background and context

2. Since November 2024, we have been seeking feedback on proposals to modernise land management in the conservation system. In November and December 2024, DOC engaged with Treaty partners in a series of regional hui. At the time, we informed them DOC would engage with post-settlement governance entities (PSGEs) in January and February 2025 to discuss upholding settlement commitments.

3. Detailed analysis has highlighted that approximately 80 settlements have commitments that we expect can be relatively easily upheld under the proposal, but that approximately 30 settlements contain commitments that embed iwi/hapū in the processes and structures of management planning. These are significant because it is proposed to replace conservation management strategies (CMSs) and conservation management plans (CMPs) with a single layer of area plans, and to streamline processes for preparing and approving them.
4. Treaty partners will expect that decisions on how to uphold these commitments in a new system are informed by substantive good faith discussions that reconcile the interests of PSGEs and the Crown. In some places, this may involve providing a specific 'equivalent' to the existing commitment in the new system, while in others it may require 'carving out' or grandparenting and preserving the existing arrangement. These choices will be complex and create tension with the objectives to simplify and streamline management planning.

Options and analysis

8. Given the above, we do not think it will be a good idea for DOC to send letters to PSGEs in the next fortnight with initial DOC views on how settlements can be upheld in the Bill.
9. We consider there are three broad options for progressing these issues:
 - Option 1: A general equivalence clause, with a comprehensive post-enactment programme of discussions.
 - Option 2: Remove some management plan proposals from the scope of the Bill.
 - Option 3 (recommended): Undertake targeted engagement on equivalence and re-assess in June 2025.

Proposed way forward

10. We have understood that it is not your intention for the Conservation Amendment Bill process to re-open settlement commitments, and we do not propose this. At the same time, regardless of the Crown's objectives, we think it will be important and useful to at least test the extent of concerns about equivalence via a more substantive, good faith engagement process.

11. s9(2)(g)(i) [Redacted]

s9(2)(g)(i)

Given this, we recommend the targeted engagement approach in Option 3.

12. At this stage, our advice is that this targeted engagement could involve a time-limited series of face-to-face meetings with the 30 most impacted PSGEs between March and June 2025, with the remaining 80 dealt with via substantive correspondence. It may also be beneficial to undertake a parallel stream of engagement with Iwi Chairs Forum Pou Taiao technicians to help generate specific carve-out solutions for some categories of commitment. This could help achieve buy-in with PSGEs.
13. Under option 3, we would brief you again in May/June 2025 with an assessment of whether (or to what extent) agreement with PSGEs is possible prior to introduction. If some groups cannot or choose not to engage, or do not provide explicit agreement, you may need to consider other options for progressing these parts of the Bill. For example, some version of Options 1 or 2 could be pursued at that stage to maintain your timeframes for introduction.
14. Even if Option 3 does not result in explicit agreement from all groups in the time available prior to introduction, we still consider it the best option to pursue in the first instance. It supports the Treaty principles and Crown obligations engaged when undertaking law reform that affects Māori interests generally, and deed of settlement provisions in particular. This means any future choices about whether to pursue Options 1 or 2 are clearer and better informed through engagement. s9(2)(h)
15. You are meeting Pou Taiao chairs on Monday, 3 February 2025. You may wish to express interest in working with them on approaches to the proposals and upholding redress. We have briefed you separately with proposed talking points for this meeting (25-B-0017 – Supp).
16. If you indicate a preference for Option 3, we can provide you with advice in February 2025 setting out parameters for a more detailed engagement. This would cover:
 - Principles to govern these discussions,
 - A draft communication to PSGEs putting forward this approach,
 - Some of the specific challenges for upholding different types of commitments and initial thoughts on options for doing so,
 - Coordinating engagement on settlements across both RM and conservation reform, including the benefits and risks in doing so (subject to Cabinet decisions about next steps for RM reform).

We recommend that you ... (Ngā tohutohu)

a)	Note DOC has been undertaking detailed analysis of the challenges in upholding Treaty settlements under the Conservation Amendment Bill.
b)	Note while DOC had been intending to give PSGEs an initial view of how their redress could be upheld in February 2025, following detailed analysis, we now consider a change in approach is needed to ensure meaningful, good faith engagement and to generate more specific policy options for upholding settlements.

c)	Indicate your preference for an approach to upholding settlements in this context: Option 1 (not recommended): A general equivalence clause, with a comprehensive post-enactment programme of discussions. Option 2 (not recommended): Remove some management plan proposals from the scope of the Bill. Option 3 (recommended): Undertake targeted engagement on equivalence and re-assess in June 2025, with parallel engagement with Pou Taiao technicians.	Choose one: Yes / No Yes / No Yes / No

Purpose – Te aronga

17. This briefing discusses high-level approaches to upholding Treaty settlement commitments in the Conservation Amendment Bill, in light of new analysis of the complexity and expectations in this context.

Background and context – Te horopaki

18. Since November 2024, we have been seeking feedback on proposals to modernise land management in the conservation system. These comprise potential changes to management planning, concessions, and land exchange and disposal processes.
19. Your October 2024 Cabinet paper seeking approval to consult noted targeted engagement with post-settlement governance entities (PSGEs) would be needed to uphold the mana and intent of their Treaty settlements. The discussion document for consultation set out a high-level approach to Treaty obligations for this work:
 - Some proposals would support effective implementation of section 4 by creating specific requirements as a means of giving effect to Treaty principles.
 - The mana and intent of Treaty settlements would be upheld, and rights under the Marine and Coastal Area (Takutai Moana) Act 2011 and Ngā Rohe Moana o Ngā Hapū o Ngāti Porou Act 2019 would be preserved.
 - Any agreements in protocols, relationship agreements and other agreements (i.e. not in legislation or deeds) would continue where consistent with any new legislative arrangements.
20. In November and December 2024, DOC engaged with Treaty partners in a series of regional hui. At the time, we informed them DOC would engage with PSGEs in January and February 2025 to discuss upholding settlements. During hui, Treaty partners asked for more detail about how specifically their settlements would be upheld if the proposed changes go ahead, and what system design elements could look like in practice. It also became clear that we needed to map potential planning boundaries, taking account of planning redress, before engagement with PSGEs.

Detailed analysis has highlighted significant policy choices

21. The conservation portfolio has more Treaty settlement commitments than any other. Further detailed analysis of these has highlighted that approximately 80 settlements have commitments that we expect can be relatively easily upheld under the proposals. These largely relate to rights of first refusal (RFRs), overlay classifications and concession processes. Some may require purely consequential amendments to settlement legislation (e.g. references to general policies being amended to refer to the National Conservation Policy Statement).
22. However, some settlements (approximately 30) contain commitments that embed iwi/hapū in the processes and structures of management planning. These are significant because it is proposed to replace conservation management strategies (CMSs) and conservation management plans (CMPs) with a single layer of area plans, and streamline processes for preparing and approving them, to clear a significant backlog in the planning system.
23. Treaty partners will expect that decisions about how to uphold these commitments amid changes to structures and processes will involve substantive, good faith discussions, which reconcile both PSGE and Crown interests. In some places, this may involve providing a specific 'equivalent' to the existing commitment in the new system. In others, it may require 'carving out' or grandparenting and preserving the existing arrangement. For example:

- Some settlements (approximately 12) provide for iwi nomination to conservation boards, with the expectation this would provide influence over the Boards' current role in reviewing and advising on CMSs, or in approving CMPs. The Bill would replace CMSs and CMPs with a single layer of area plans and shift the approval role for both to the Minister (as opposed to the NZCA or the Boards). s9(2)(f)(iv)

[Redacted]

- Other settlements (approximately 26) provide for the co-authoring or co-approval of specific CMSs, CMS chapters, NPMPs or CMPs. s9(2)(f)(iv)

[Redacted]

24. The numbers above are preliminary. Line-by-line analysis of deeds and legislation is still underway. As such, we do not yet have a comprehensive sense of which (and how many) commitments might need to be upheld via a change to deeds and direct amendment to settlement legislation, and how many might be resolved by deeming or referential provisions in the Conservation Act itself. It is unlikely we will be able to complete this before consultation ends on 28 February 2025.

Engagement on resource management reform s9(2)(g)(i)

25. We have recently discussed these issues with the Ministry for the Environment (MfE), which is considering its approach to upholding Treaty settlements in the context of the proposed repeal and replacement of the Resource Management Act 1991 (RMA). This is analogous to the conservation context in that a number of redress commitments (including co-management models linked to statutory plan-making) will need to be upheld in the new system.

² The 18-month timeframe was included due to policy proposals not being fully developed at the time – if policy proposals are sufficiently developed and discussions with PSGEs can start quickly, this timeframe could potentially be reduced.

Options for upholding settlements in the Conservation Amendment Bill

31. Given all of the above, we do not think it will be a good idea for DOC to send letters to PSGEs in the next fortnight providing specific thoughts on how settlements can be upheld under the Bill. While some iwi/hapū reacted to consultation on the discussion document by asking for this kind of information, in most cases (particularly for the 30 groups that have more complex redress), we think such proposals will be seen as pre-empting a more substantive, good faith engagement approach, and as the Crown not being cognisant of the strategic context raised by the amendments.

32. s9(2)(g)(i) [Redacted]

33. In this context, we see three main options for progressing the Conservation Amendment Bill while upholding settlement commitments. The pros and cons of these options are discussed under the headings below.

Option 1: A general equivalence clause, with a comprehensive post-enactment programme of discussions

34. This option would mirror the approach taken during the development of the NBA and SPA.

35. s9(2)(g)(i) [Redacted]

36. s9(2)(g)(i) [Redacted]

s9(2)(g)(i)

Option 2: Remove some management planning proposals from the scope of the Bill

37. An alternative option for progressing the Bill in this context is to simply remove the content most likely to require substantive engagement with PSGEs. This would mean retaining a focus on fixing concessions without some of the management planning changes, such as the introduction of area plans.

42. s9(2)(g)(i)

Option 3 (recommended): Undertake targeted engagement on equivalence and reassess in June 2025

43. We recommend you consider a third option. This would involve undertaking less formal engagement ahead of introduction on specific equivalence proposals for the most complicated 30 settlements, and a parallel, correspondence-based approach for the other 80 relevant settlements, as set out in the table below.

Type of settlements	Number (est.)	Approach
Can be upheld without substantive change to settlements	80 settlements	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Inform in writing why we consider the substance of their commitments are not affected/would not change. Invite feedback on, and where necessary seek agreement to, any consequential changes needed.
Need specific equivalence/carve out proposals to be able to incorporate	30 settlements – see list in Attachment A	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Propose discussions about specific equivalence provisions that uphold mana and intent of commitments. This would be a time-limited process for getting consensus, e.g. 3 face-to-face hui with each PSGE between March and June 2025.³ Discussions would focus on the nature of Bill provisions needed to provide equivalence or 'carve out' existing commitments from reform. E.g. would it be acceptable to preserve CMPs created under redress by deeming them area plans with the same coverage under the new framework and preserving existing processes for drafting, approving and reviewing them? substantive, good faith, but time-limited engagement process. We therefore recommend Option 3.

53. You are meeting Pou Taiao chairs on Monday, 3 February 2025. You may wish to express interest in working with them on approaches to the proposals and upholding redress. Their views will be valuable in shaping the options, and any way forward agreed with them could have a significant, positive influence. We have briefed you separately with proposed talking points for this meeting (25-B-0017 – Supp).
54. If you indicate a preference for Option 3, we can provide you with advice later in February 2025 setting out parameters for a more detailed engagement approach. This would cover:
- Principles to govern these discussions,
 - A draft communication to PSGEs putting forward this approach,
 - Some of the specific challenges for upholding different types of commitments and initial thoughts on options for doing so,
 - Coordinating engagement on settlements across both RM and conservation reform, including the benefits and risks in doing so (subject to Cabinet decisions about next steps for RM reform), and

Consultation – Kōrero whakawhiti

67. MfE was consulted in the preparation of this briefing. Crown Law was informed. Te Puni Kōkiri and Te Arawhiti have also been provided with a copy of this briefing.

Financial implications – Te hīraunga pūtea

68. It is highly likely DOC will be asked to resource PSGEs and/or Pou Taiao to participate in the targeted engagement recommended under Option 3. In addition, that option will require significant resourcing to be reprioritised from within DOC to deliver.
69. We will brief you on the options and implications of these costs should you indicate a preference to explore Option 3.
