

Ngaro parirau | Dobsonfly

FUN FACTS

- The young (larvae) dobsonflies live in freshwater and are sometimes called toebiters!
- The tentacles along the side aren't legs – they're gills so the larvae can breathe underwater
- The larva will go through a pupal stage (like a chrysalis) before emerging from the water to fly, looking completely different